It's been great working with you, and I would appreciate your perspective. In the last three months, what are one or two things (actions, approach, skills, experience, etc.) you think I have excelled at in my job – things I should keep or continue to do?	I have always appreciated your prompt responses to my questions, which are always knowledgeable and helpful. You are always quick to assist others.
What is one thing (actions, approach, skills, experience, etc.) you suggest I reconsider or rethink that could make a real difference to my success?	The only thing that I can say is to continue to take the time to train and invest in the newer people. It really does make a world of difference.

He is a master at resolving issues, but at the same time is not afraid to ask questions when it is needed. Not only that, he also spends a great deal of his time helping and training others. I honestly believe that our team would not run nearly as smooth as it is now.

I started a week or two ahead of you but i feel comfortable coming to you to ask for help. I think you are level headed and selfless, always willing to look at a ticket and find a solution even when its something out of your comfort zone.

I don't think there is anything you could do different. I notice you don't only help me and our team, but also are a helping hand to other teams to. I think you have to keep what you doing up because you are a team player and a knowledgeable one at that.
